OKLAHOMA SEEKS TO BAR TEXAS CATTLE

Injunction Suit Filed at Pawhucket, Osage Nation. Texas Cattlemen Will Fight Case to a Finish.

Special to the Eagle.

Fort Worth, Texas, April 13.—Dispatches received here today from Pawhucket, Osage Nation, Oklahoma, say that the county attorney today filed in the district court there an injunction to restrain Texas stockmen from bringing their herds to the Osage Nation for pasturage or other purposes. If the injunction is granted it will stop the movement of millions of cattle from this state every season. The county attorney who instituted the injunction proceedings bases his action on the claim that moving great herds of cattle from Texas to that country spreads ticks, which cause splenic fever and other diseases. Texas cattlemen will fight the case to a finish.

Ready Replies.

One of Lord Carmarthen's future constituents once asked the youthful candidate his opinion upon some abstract question of which he knew nothing. "Let him alone!" cried another derisively. "Don't you see he's nothing but a baby?" "What do you think?" reiterated his inquirer, heedless of the interruption and determined to have an answer. "I think," said Lord Carmarthen, with ready wit, "that it is high time for all babies to be in bed," and so saying he gathered up his papers and disappeared from the platform.

Again—and this last anecdote is so well known as to have become well nigh historical—at a crowded meeting just before his election, he was interrupted by the question, "Does your mother know you're out?" "Yes, she does," was the instant retort, "and by Tuesday night she will know I'm in." His prophecy proved correct, and he headed the poll by a large majority.

A Batch of Bulls.

An Irishman excused himself from going to church by saying he had such an excellent telescope that with it he could bring the church so near he could hear the organ playing.

It was Pat who observed, after watching two men shoot at an eagle and kill it, that they might have saved the powder and shot, as the fall alone would have killed the bird.

And it was Pat again who, telling a story as original and being informed by one of his auditors that he had read it in the translation of a Latin work, cried out: "Confound those ancients! They are always stealing one's good thoughts."

The Real Scrap.

Two muscular individuals were hammering at each other in the ring.

"Horrible!" ejaculated a tender hearted spectator.

"Horrible nothing," said a regular patron. "If you want to see a real scrap get next to them when they divide the purse."—Philadelphia Ledger.

In a Safe Place.

"We have a man in this prison who never tried to escape," declared the head keeper.

"What's he in for?" inquired the visitor.

"Bigamy," replied the head keeper.—Bohemian.

Recipe For Goodness.

Half of the wickedness of life is owing to misery. Make a man happy and he is good. He revives like a flower refreshed by the dew of heaven; he becomes sanguine, enthusiastic, energetic.—London Graphic.

Loving hearts are like poor folks—they are contented with whatever is given to them.—Swedish.

Nature's Armor.

Lobsters and crabs are familiar examples of armor bearing creatures. The lobsters have wonderful coats of mail suggestive of those devised by human warriors in the age of chivalry. They combine perfect security with ease of movement, owing to their jointed structure. The manner in which crabs when at rest tuck their legs beneath them so as to bring them under the shelter of the hard carapace is interesting. The crab is doubly protected, for it resembles a water worn pebble, and thus looks to large fishes which like to eat the crustacean—so long as it keeps still—very similar to the objects with which it is surrounded.

Cutting the Finger Nails.

Cutting the finger nails appears to have been the most indispensable service the ancient Roman barber rendered to his patrons. Martial, chaffing a fop who had tried to dodge the barber by using plasters to remove his beard, asks triumphantly, "How are you going to manage about your nails?" And the miser in Plautus collects the parings of his nails from the barber to make something out of them, apparently never dreaming that he could save money by cutting them himself.

No Excuse.

Walter (whose attention has been called to a gross error in addition)—Very sorry, sir; but, even if you hadn't found out the mistake, the firm would have benefited, not me. Diner—Then you have no excuse!—Punch.

Right to the Point.

"He is a man of few words." "Yes, and they are, 'What is there in it for me?'"—Detroit Free Press.
